How do I contact a worker representative on the JOHSC?

If you have a health and safety issue that needs to be addressed, you do not have to solve it on your own. Help is available.

Always tell your supervisor or manager about the issue first. See the fact sheet "What can I do about an OHS issue" for more information about this step.

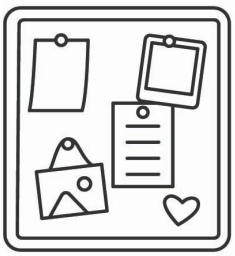

If your issue has not been resolved, or you have questions about it, you can contact your Joint Occupational Health and Safety Committee (JOHSC) worker representative.

How do I contact a worker representative?

- The best way is to talk with them, hopefully in person!
- A phone call
- An email
- If you work for a health authority, use the OHS Resource Centre "Send a message" form to send a JOHSC member an email.

How do I find their contact information?

- The employer is required to list the names of the committee members and their work locations on the OHS board so you know where to find them at work.
- Ask at a local meeting.
- Contact your steward or local executive.

Check the OHS board!

The employer is required to list the names of JOHS Committee members and their work locations on the OHS board.

If you work for a health authority, you can send a message through the OHS Resource Centre

OHS RESOURCE CENTRE